Hyphe integrates with OMS Wyden

AMSTERDAM, October 4, 2023 – Trading technology leader, Wyden, has integrated Amsterdam-based digital asset liquidity provider, Hyphe. The partnership gives Wyden clients the opportunity to access Hyphe’s proprietary liquidity pool and extensive digital asset coverage.

Wyden and Hyphe have partnered to provide financial institutions with deeper crypto liquidity and extended digital asset coverage. Clients will include banks, brokers and asset managers. Hyphe is registered with the Dutch central bank (DNB); Hyphe’s German subsidiary recently received a securities trading licence from Bundesanstalt für Finanzdienstleistungsaufsicht (BaFin), which provides the firm with the highest standard of regulatory supervision available in Europe.

Easy access to deep liquidity with minimal counterparty risk

Hyphe offers clients a chance to trade independently of exchanges, significantly reducing counterparty risk. Hyphe’s proprietary price discovery technology, Clear-Calculus, determines the fair market price for assets, 24/7, and forms the basis of Hyphe’s banking-grade Best Execution Policy. Meanwhile uptime on the platform is assured at over 99.5%.

Seamless trading, custody and core banking integration

Wyden’s crypto portfolio, order and execution management system (OEMS) provides a powerful trading and orchestration platform covering the entire trade lifecycle. Wyden also offers seamless custody and core banking integration for financial institutions such as banks and brokers.

Dolf Diederichsen, Hyphe Co-founder & CEO: “Wyden shares our mission of increasing access to digital assets. We’ve been a keen observer of the platform and are pleased we can now extend our easy-access digital asset liquidity to Wyden’s client base.”

Andy Flury, founder and CEO at Wyden added: “Our partnership with Hyphe further enhances the trading environment and experience for our institutional clients that demand deep liquidity and institutional-grade execution and servicing.
